Pokemon Pearl Version: The best generation to date It's been three years since the Fire Red and Leaf Green Pokemon versions were released for the Game Boy Advance. It was not such a surprise, then, that the game Freak decided to release a new - Pearl, of course - on the Nintendo DS because it has a huge memory for handling more games. The Nintendo DS is the perfect vehicle for adding dozens of new pocket monsters and creating the region's largest Pokemon so far. The total number of Pokemon is now 493, since there were 107 pocket monsters added to the game. Some of the Pokemon characters look a little familiar because Game Freak has made them more powerful through evolution. This is a welcome addition, as seeing the same character from one game to another can be boring. In this game you will play in the Sinnoh region, the largest of its kind in the Pokemon world so far; its area is larger than Hoenn, which was the largest region before. Sinnoh also looks fantastic, thanks in part to the cool three-dimensional impact on buildings and cities that have added to the appeal of its huge size. Many new elements, such as time of day, dirty areas, and snow zones, have also been introduced into the game, all of which added to the cost of playback through visual attraction to the game. Other notable new items also included Touch Mechanics, which is available on every game on the Nintendo DS, as well as battles and local trading with friends online. So if you ask me whether the Diamond/Pearl version is the best version of Pokemon yet, I'd say: Yes, it is! And it means it. Story But let me answer the question about the minds of many gamers: Is the story in this version the same as in other Pokemon games? Yes, it is, but the emphasis should be placed that the Pokemon story is not bad per se, and it is the same story with pearl's version. As in previous versions of the game, you Pokemon trainer went on an adventure to become a cream crop. You have the choice to be male or female, although your choice will have no impact on your score, strategy and chances of winning, as only the appearance of your virtual character affects. You also have the opportunity to give yourself a name as well as give your rival coach a name; Your rival lives in Twinliff Town, a small village. You start the game by watching a television show regarding the efforts of a group of people in catching Red Gyarados, a pocket monster and the first of hundreds that you have to grab and train. After watching the show, you'll get instructions on finding Pokemon, although this task won't be as important as others later. If you want to start playing, you'll walk down where your mother will tell you about your opponent - for convenience, let's call him a rival - wanting to see you, even though she has no idea of the reason. You head over to the rival's house where he meets you at the front door and he asks you to go with him to Lake Verity, but since he forgot something, he asks you to wait for him as he gets the thing inside. You and the Rival have passed to the lake, and on the way he will tell you about the search for Red Gyarados. When you are near You see an old man and a young girl, but they eventually leave. You walk next to a short grass area on the shore of the lake, but you are soon attacked by two wild starlys. Fortunately, the old man left a suitcase with three pocket monsters inside. You can choose from three Pokemon characters, namely, Chimchar, Piplup, and Turtwig, as your starting Pokemon. You'll find that no matter which of the three Pokemon characters you choose, your opponent will always take Pokemon with an advantage over your own pocket monster. In my case, I chose Piplup while a rival chose Turtwig; Since Grass beats the water, the task of beating rival Pokemon began early in the game. After beating Starly, you find that the old man was actually Professor Rowan, who in turn informs you that you and the rival can keep your respective pocket monsters. After that, you can start your adventure, including fighting with eight gym leaders and defeating the elite foursome. Your ultimate goal: to become a Pokemon champion. But the game also has its problems, such as fighting the team of Galactic, the evil group that pursued the Red Gyarados and that wanted to take on Sinnoh. While the story may get a little wobbly, it's still a big story. Build.
